Making Papier-Mache Animals

The Latest Society Fad

MAKING little statuettes of pet animals has become a fad of the idle rich. The papier mache representations do not lack spirit and individuality, as the illustrations show. These little statuettes are preserved in curio cabinets like the little manikin dolls so much the vogue for the past two seasons.

FEMININE NOTES

THE AMERICAN GIRL THE MOST ATHLETIC IN THE WORLD. SAYS COUNTESS DE LA BEGASIERE—ARE WOMEN LOSING THEIR FEMININE FIGURES?—A BLIND COLLEGE GIRL WHO WILL EDUCATE OTHERS SIMILARLY AFFLICTED.

THE first foreign woman to make an aeroplane flight over American soil—the pretty little Countess de la Begasiere—is enthusiastic about aeroplaning. She says the charm of skimming through the air is that you feel so free; there is nothing to oppose you and no feeling of friction, no jar, no rough contact with opposing surfaces, as in automobilizing. Her brother, Count de Lesseps, is a well known aviator, and the countess was the first woman he took up. The countess says American women are good sports and before very long many of them will be flying. Our young girls especially seem to be like men in their carelessness of danger—they are the most athletic in the world.

Louis Potter, the sculptor, says that the American girl is becoming more masculine in her figure. "Women's shoulders are growing broader," he says. "Look at the shoulders of the woman fond of golf, of tennis, of running and swimming, and you will see no resemblance to the graceful sloping shoulders of her great-grandmother. This new athletic woman has a flat chest, extremely broad shoulders, large waist and small hips. The fat has been worked off until curves are few and far between. So, with the shoulders broad and square, the waist enlarged, the hips devoid of any flesh, you have the masculine figure. Shoemakers and chiropodists unite in declaring that women's feet are becoming larger. They are becoming better shaped at the same time, let it be added by way of consolation. Owing to the increasing popularity of walking the muscles are closer knit, the ankles are stronger, while the arch is higher than ever.

There is a blind student at Barnard, Miss Margaret Hogan. Through the help of her classmates, who raised $425 in three days to cover her expenses, Miss Hogan was enabled to stay in Barnard this year and thereby complete her course and win her A. B. She has shown marked ability in all her classes and on graduation will become an advanced teacher of the blind. Her pluck in making her way with as little help as possible has won universal admiration.

Miss Mary Tillinghast, whose stained glass windows have won worldwide appreciation, has just finished a new representation of Christ for the Central Congregational church of Toledo, O. She has followed a new conception of the Redeemer, taken from the letters of a contemporary of his, a Roman senator, Lantulus Justinian. Miss Tillinghast was so impressed with his description that she followed it faithfully.
